Windows 10 (UEFI). Scanners (and their drivers) are very common on the Web nowadays. But sadly there are no scanners TWAIN-compliant available for Linux. I present this source code for my Canon Pixma TS5900 and for my Canon Pixma TS7100 / TS8100. TWAIN compliant is a Windows standard. It allows your scanner to be read and used with various software on your computer (such as GIMP, Firefox, etc.) or scanner applications (like ScannerPro, etc.) on the web. GIMP also supports TWAIN-compliant scanners, but I don't know if the scanner I used (which costed more than the scanner you need for only $100) is one of the supported models. Prerequisites. For Windows, you can use the installer of the GIMP package. sudo apt-get install inkscape sudo apt-get install icontool The installer program downloads and installs the GIMP package. The below commands will install the GIMP package and the two programs mentioned above. sudo apt-get install inkscape icontool I have a Canon Pixma TS5900, a Canon Pixma TS7100 and a Canon Pixma TS8100. The output of the GIMP installer was the following. It appears that the program works for the three models. Install the driver The driver is installed like this: A first time. Let's set up the GIMP first. Open a terminal and type: Inkscape has been installed and now you need to configure it. In the ~/.config/inkscape/config file (you can create this file if it does not exist), enter the 82157476af
